

Don't Miss This Comic Operetta

Beginning at 8 p. m. on Wednesday, July 6, Plymouth Rock Center will present a new version of Gilbert and Sullivan's comic operetta, The Mikado. The conductor will be Harris Crohn, who directed the operetta in Detroit and worked with Boris Goldovsky at Tanglewood. He is assisted by Louis Bagor who studied under Paul Hindemith and recently accompanied John Brownlee in NYC.

Talented Team

Mary Leonard plays Yum-Yum, ward of the Lord High Executioner, and Alphonse Libera plays Nanki-Poo, the minstrel. Johanna Albrecht, the noted dancer, arranged the dance sequences. She has just returned from her singing-dancing engagement with the Augsburg Opera Company in Germany. Dorine, formerly with Jackie Gleason, designed the costumes and Denton Snyder of the Smith College Drama Workshop designed the scenes.

The Mikado opens the Center's Tenth Anniversary season.

Weeks ago, Blair McCloskey wrote Patrick McGinnis, the railroad president, asking if he had an old locomotive bell to contribute to Plymouth Rock Center. He received a prompt affirmative answer from Mr. McGinnis, and Saturday a 200-pound brass bell came mounted on a block of burnished oak. Thus a huge bell that banged for many New Haven passengers will summon The Center's audiences henceforth. Incidentally, The Center needs bed pillows, settees and porch furniture. Call 685 if you have any. Also, if you have a piano you would like to loan or donate.

Robert Myhrum, formerly with Plymouth Rock Center, is an assistant producer on Studio One, TV.
